

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

1                    1.     In a first computer, a method of providing a print status,
2     comprising:
3                (a)     receiving content from an external device, the content executable 4     by a computer to cause a computer to display a print status page based upon 5     dynamic input received from a printer printing a print job received from the 6     computer; and
7                (b)     executing the content so as to generate the print status
8     page.

1                    2.     A computer, comprising:
2                (a)     means for receiving content from an external device, the 3     content being executable to cause the computer to display a print status page
4     based upon dynamic input received from a printer printing a print job received
5     from the computer; and
6                (b)     means for executing the content so as to generate the print 7     status page.

1                    3.     A program storage medium readable by a computer, tangibly
2     embodying a program of instruction executable by the computer to perform 3     method steps display a printer status page, the method steps comprising:
4                (a)     receiving content from an external device, the content
5     executable by a computer to cause a computer to display a print status page
6     based upon dynamic input received from a printer printing a print job received 7     from the computer; and
8                (b)     executing the content so as to generate the print status
9     page.